

Catalina

Islander

Conservancy celebrates the completion of Trekking Catalina

Launch party for new trail system set for Sept. 14 in San Pedro

FOR THE ISLANDER

Catalina Island Conservancy is celebrating the recent completion of Trekking Catalina, a new master trails system that includes 27 miles of new and enhanced hiking trails and is the biggest addition to the Catalina trails system since the completion of the Trans-Catalina Trail in 2009.

With the completion of Trekking Catalina, the Conservancy now offers 165 miles of recreational roads and hiking trails for visitors and residents to explore Catalina's more than 42,000 acres of wildlands.

To celebrate this milestone, the Conservancy is partnering with REI, the outdoor outfitter and retailer, and Brouwerij West, a popular craft brewery, for a Trekking Catalina Launch Party on Sept. 14 in San Pedro. The event is free and open to the public. It will feature descriptions of the new trails and tips for hiking Catalina, live music, food trucks, prizes and new Catalina hiking maps. The event begins at 6:30 p.m. at Brouwerij West, 110 East 22nd St., San Pedro.

Parson's Landing is a breathtaking spot along the Trans-Catalina Trail and is renowned for its beautiful sunsets and idyllic beach campsites.
Photo courtesy Catalina Island Conservancy

"With new signs, a greatly improved trails map and waterless restrooms, Trekking Catalina will make the Island a world-class destination for outdoor enthusiasts," said Tony Budrovich, Conservancy president and CEO. "Trekking Catalina gives hikers even more opportunities to explore the Island's wildlands, experience nature and see California as it once was—wild and free."

The new master trails system

Trekking, Page 5

Trekking

From page 1

offers improved access points of entry at Avalon and Two Harbors, changes to the Trans-Catalina Trail and new restroom facilities along the trails, which will be completed by the end of the year. Trekking Catalina also includes improved trailheads and signage for navigating trails, as well as interpretive enhancements.

In a written statement, the Conservancy extended its gratitude to former Fourth District Los Angeles County Supervisor Don Knabe, current Supervisor Janice Hahn, and the Los Angeles County Regional Park and Open Space District for providing the support needed to complete the enhancement to the Island's trail system. Trekking Catalina minimized the impact on the land by upgrading and consolidating "social trails," which are unofficial trails created by wildlife and the foot traffic of campers and other users over time. The new trails were built with the help of the Conservation Corps of Long Beach, providing employment for underserved and at-risk youth, and seasonal field crews from the Student Conservation Association.

Hiking maps depicting the new trail system will be available in early September and may be purchased at the Conservancy House in downtown Avalon. Hiking permits are also required so hikers can be located in the event of an emergency. Hiking permits are free and can be obtained online from the Conservancy's website or at the Explore Store, the Wrigley Memorial & Botanic Garden, the Nature Center on Avalon Canyon Road, Airport in the Sky and Two Harbors Visitor Center. To protect the natural habitats, the Conservancy asks hikers to stay on the designated trails.

The completion of Trekking Catalina is another major milestone in Imagine Catalina, the Conservancy's long-range strategic vision and master plan. Construction is underway on another Imagine Catalina project, The Trailhead Visitor Center, in Avalon. It's scheduled to be completed next year.

Hermit Gulch Trail is part of the newly re-aligned Trans-Catalina Trail. The trail is bordered by variety of native plants and features stunning views of Avalon and the mainland as hikers make their way to the summit.